

I respectfully urge the Commission to reject any and all efforts to restrict the growth of satellite radio. I pay for this service and the broadcasters are just worried about their advertising revenue. I travel across the USA in a Motor Home and the only way I can receive music, weather, news and traffic reports is with XM radio. Since I am paying for this service, and XM Radio is not a direct competitor to broadcast radio, I don't feel the position of the NAB is with foundation. DirecTV which I also use in my RV was attacked by broadcasters and Cable providers for the same reason not many years ago. Fortunately Satellite TV won and the Cable providers were not hurt as they said they would be. Satellite radio should not be limited to protect local radio. The diversity of XM Radio, and the convenience it offers, is not matched by any local broadcast radio stations
